Notes for MARIE GRIEP:

Then my father had a sister Marie, who was married and lived in Rostok at the Baltic Sea (Ostsee). She had at least one daughter, Bertha, but maybe more children. Tante Sophie visited her in her late years in the East-Zone (Former Communist East Germany) in Rostok. We never met her.

More About MARIE GRIEP:

Note 1: Bertha Griep Note (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.)

8. vi. AUGUSTE GRIEP, d. Unknown.
- vii. SOPHIA GRIEP (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.), d. Unknown.

Notes for SOPHIA GRIEP:

The sister next to my father is Tante Sophie, who practically raised him. The mother was too old and most probably tired of having and raising children. Tante Sophie never married, but cared for her old parents, then lived in their apartment, renting out to single people. Sometimes we lived there in the winter. In the summer we lived in a cottage in Hamburg-Farmsen. Tante Sophie was a piano teacher and I got my lessons from her. It was difficult for me going to school, then going to her lessons, and the long way home. I was tired, when I came home and didn't practise much or doing homework for school.

More About SOPHIA GRIEP:

Note 1: Sophie GriepNote (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.)

He married ELSE UNKNOWN (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.). She died Unknown.

Notes for OTTO GRIEP:

From Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep):

The oldest son was Otto Griep, who became a professor for chemistry at an all girls high school in Hamburg (Lerchenfeld Gymnasium). He married Else ?, whose parents had a furniture store somewhere at the Luebeckerstrasse in Hamburg Germany and must have been well off. They built a house outside the city limits of Hamburg in Gross Hansdorf, so that the Nazi party could not get him. His address was no longer in the city of Hamburg, but in the county of Schleswig-Holstein.

Children of OTTO GRIEP and ELSE UNKNOWN are:

10. i. GERTRUD⁶ GRIEP, b. Private.
ii. WOLFGANG GRIEP (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.), d. Unknown, During World War II in Russia (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.).

Notes for WOLFGANG GRIEP:

From Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep):

12. iii. URSULA GRIEP, b. Private.

7. ANNA⁵ GRIEP (CARL FRIEDRICH⁴, JOHANN KARL FRIEDRICH³, JOHANN GOTTFRIED², DIETRICH¹) (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.) died Unknown. She married UNKNOWN WENIG (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.). He was born in ?, Vienna, Austria, and died Unknown.

Notes for ANNA GRIEP:

Another sister was Anna, who married a man from Vienna from a rich house, but who hadn't learned anything and Tante Anna worked as a sewing sleeves at home to bring in the money. His last name was Wenig. They have two children: One son, whose name I don't know, and who was killed in Russia in World War II; One daughter, Leopoldine, called Poldi, who married a gardener. For some reason they were connected with the Salvation Army as receiver. Her husband had something wrong with him, either he didn't like to work, or was in prison or something, but they had two lovely children, whom I saw one day, when they visited Tante Sophie: a boy and a little girl. Poldi apparently couldn't learn very well, she never grasped the way to measure something on a scale, although my father and Tante Sophie tried to teach her in order for her to get a job in a store.

Tante Anna and her husband were bombed out in Hamburg in 1943 and sent to the Bohemian forest, a very beautiful but lonely place. Since they didn't have money nor connections, they couldn't return to Hamburg and died there shortly after each other. My father says from homesickness and loneliness.

More About ANNA GRIEP:

Note 1: Anna Griep Note (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.)

Children of ANNA GRIEP and UNKNOWN WENIG are:

- ii. LEOPOLDINE WENIG, b. Private.

8. AUGUSTE⁵ GRIEP (CARL FRIEDRICH⁴, JOHANN KARL FRIEDRICH³, JOHANN GOTTFRIED², DIETRICH¹) (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.) died Unknown. He married EMIL EHMKE (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.). She died Unknown.

Notes for AUGUSTE GRIEP:

There was another sister Bertha, whose name I have forgotten. She married an older man: Emil Ehmke. They had a son, Bernhard, who was killed in Russia in World War II.

9. HANS HERMANN⁵ GRIEP (CARL FRIEDRICH⁴, JOHANN KARL FRIEDRICH³, JOHANN GOTTFRIED², DIETRICH¹) (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.) was born May 18, 1898 in Hamburg, Germany, and died December 28, 1989 in Hamburg, Germany. He married GERTRUD HAACK (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.), daughter of WILHELM HAACK and LINE MEYER. She was born January 01, 1897 in Hamburg, Germany, and died November 13, 1979 in Hamburg, Germany.

Notes for HANS HERMANN GRIEP:

Hans was a streetcar conductor, office worker, and representative for sail cloth etc.

Note

The youngest son was my father, Hans Hermann Griep, the rebellious one, untrained and never disciplined in any schooling. His interest was to live healthy, which he studied very much, but by being so unconventional cut himself off from many friends and relatives.

I do not know any more of my father's sisters or brothers. Since Hamburg was heavily bombed during World War II, I do not believe that there are birth registers available anymore from that time.

Since people in the olden times had large families I am quite sure that I have a lot of relatives in Mecklenburg.

- vii. SOPHIA GRIEP (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.), d. Unknown.

Notes for SOPHIA GRIEP:

The sister next to my father is Tante Sophie, who practically raised him. The mother was too old and most probably tired of having and raising children. Tante Sophie never married, but cared for her old parents, then lived in their apartment, renting out to single people. Sometimes we lived there in the winter. In the summer we lived in a cottage in Hamburg-Farmsen. Tante Sophie was a piano teacher and I got my lessons from her. It was difficult for me going to school, then going to her lessons, and the long way home. I was tired, when I came home and didn't practise much or doing homework for school.

Notes for OTTO GRIEP:

From Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep):

The oldest son was Otto Griep, who became a professor for chemistry at an all girls high school in Hamburg (Lerchenfeld Gymnasium). He married Else ?, whose parents had a furniture store somewhere at the Luebeckerstrasse in Hamburg Germany and must have been well off. They built a house outside the city limits of Hamburg in Gross Hansdorf, so that the Nazi party could not get him. His address was no longer in the city of Hamburg, but in the county of Schleswig-Holstein.

She married UNKNOWN WENIG (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.). He was born in ?, Vienna, Austria, and died Unknown.

Notes for ANNA GRIEP:

Another sister was Anna, who married a man from Vienna from a rich house, but who hadn't learned anything and Tante Anna worked as a sewing sleeves at home to bring in the money. His last name was Wenig. They have two children: One son, whose name I don't know, and who was killed in Russia in World War II; One daughter, Leopoldine, called Poldi, who married a gardener. For some reason they were connected with the Salvation Army as receiver. Her husband had something wrong with him, either he didn't like to work, or was in prison or something, but they had two lovely children, whom I saw one day, when they visited Tante Sophie: a boy and a little girl. Poldi apparently couldn't learn very well, she never grasped the way to measure something on a scale, although my father and Tante Sophie tried to teach her in order for her to get a job in a store.

Tante Anna and her husband were bombed out in Hamburg in 1943 and sent to the Bohemian forest, a very beautiful but lonely place. Since they didn't have money nor connections, they couldn't return to Hamburg and died there shortly after each other. My father says from homesickness and loneliness.

8. HANS HERMANN⁵ GRIEP (CARL FRIEDRICH⁴, MARIE ELISE³ DAHMS, JOHANN FRIEDRICH², GEORG FRIEDRICH¹) (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.) was born May 18, 1898 in Hamburg, Germany, and died December 28, 1989 in Hamburg, Germany. He married GERTRUD HAACK (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.), daughter of WILHELM HAACK and LINE MEYER. She was born January 01, 1897 in Hamburg, Germany, and died November 13, 1979 in Hamburg, Germany.

Notes for HANS HERMANN GRIEP:

Hans was a streetcar conductor, office worker, and representative for sail cloth etc.

Note

The youngest son was my father, Hans Hermann Griep, the rebellious one, untrained and never disciplined in any schooling. His interest was to live healthy, which he studied very much, but by being so unconventional cut himself off from many friends and relatives.

I do not know any more of my father's sisters or brothers. Since Hamburg was heavily bombed during World War II, I do not believe that there are birth registers available anymore from that time.

Since people in the olden times had large families I am quite sure that I have a lot of relatives in Mecklenburg.

Baptism: February 16, 1873, Ochsenwerder, Germany^{6,7}

Notes for WILHELM CHRISTIAN HAACK:

Godparents Peter Hinrich Allen, David Joachim Merkens, Mrs. Catharina Margaretha Hurtig.

Reimer Von Postel (Godfather of Hans Ewe Haack) was married to one of Hannelore Falkenberg/Griep's grandfather's sisters. They had a small farm in Westerdeichstrich. One of their sons became a lieutenant in the German army in World War 2 and right after than became the office manager with Hannelore's uncle Wilhelm Haack in Suederdeichstrich. Reimer had one son and one daughter.

Today the city of Buesum and Hedwigenkoog is one city under the name of Buesum. In the summer it is crowded with tourists. There is still a small fishing fleet there.

As a child Hannelore's grandfather played in the tide marches (when the tide went out). The boys caught flatfish by stepping on them when the water ran out. When he was a young man or teenager he borrowed someone's horses and wagon and went out into the tide marshes, as she recalls, he drove over to Helschen. But on his return the incoming tide caught up with him and he did not know what to do. So he let the horses find their own way and they made it safely home.

When he told me that he and his friends went into the field to the horses, who just had some foals, the horses drank milk from the mother horses, I told him that it was lucky. He just grinned.

I think that there is much more in the church register books in Suederdeich or in Buesum about the Haack and Diercks families. But we did not want to spend more time there when we visited in 1992. It is not easy to go through all the names and find the correct ones, because there are so many Haack and Diercks. We went twice to the church office in Seuderdeich. Someone before us had ripped a page out of those church books, without letting the secretary know it. She discovered it later. It would be nice to just take photographs from all those pages, then study them at home.

4. WILLI³ MEYER (MARGARETHA REBECCA² SOLTAU, GEORG FERDINAND¹)¹⁴ died Unknown.

Notes for WILLI MEYER:

Note 1:

Notes from Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) after visiting Germany during the Summer of 2000:

Then there was the youngest brother, Willi Meyer, also a landscape gardener. He was the caretaker of the cemetery and church in Billwerder (suburb of Hamburg, Germany, ed.), living next door to us. Pastor Von Busch also gave him duty as the bookkeeper of the church. Every Saturday the whole cemetery was raked, as well as the memorial to the fallen soldiers of WW I. The graves, which had a contract to be planted, were done so, hedges cut regularly, so that the whole place was always in top shape. When we visited this summer of 2000 it made a run-down impression. Weeds were everywhere, you could hardly see the WWI war memorial. Leaves had been raked in some places, but left in the middle of walkways. Hedges were not trimmed well. In contrast the church and the cemetery in Ochsenwerder was very well taken care of. The pastorlady we had encountered four years before was on a leave of absence and they had in Billwerder only a temporary pastorlady, who apparently did not care too much. We did not meet her.

Uncle Willi also cleaned the church regularly, washed the floor, dusted all around, and on Saturday P.M. had to stick the new numbers of the songs to be sung on Sunday morning into their slots. As helpers for all of this he had his daughter, Anni, and "Tante Ische" Schertel (Luise Schertel, sisgter of Paul Schertel, a cabinetmaker with his own business in Billwerder. Both Anni and Luise Schertel were not married. This was my Tante Anni, my mother's cousin, also living next door to us. Her sister was Grethe, married to Arnolod Homann, vegetable farmer.

Notes for OTTO GRIEP:

From Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep):

The oldest son was Otto Griep, who became a professor for chemistry at an all girls high school in Hamburg (Lerchenfeld Gymnasium). He married Else ?, whose parents had a furniture store somewhere at the Luebeckerstrasse in Hamburg Germany and must have been well off. They built a house outside the city limits of Hamburg in Gross Hansdorf, so that the Nazi party could not get him. His address was no longer in the city of Hamburg, but in the county of Schleswig-Holstein.

Notes for ANNA GRIEP:

Another sister was Anna, who married a man from Vienna from a rich house, but who hadn't learned anything and Tante Anna worked as a sewing sleeves at home to bring in the money. His last name was Wenig. They have two children: One son, whose name I don't know, and who was killed in Russia in World War II; One daughter, Leopoldine, called Poldi, who married a gardener. For some reason they were connected with the Salvation Army as receiver. Her husband had something wrong with him, either he didn't like to work, or was in prison or something, but they had two lovely children, whom I saw one day, when they visited Tante Sophie: a boy and a little girl. Poldi apparently couldn't learn very well, she never grasped the way to measure something on a scale, although my father and Tante Sophie tried to teach her in order for her to get a job in a store.

Tante Anna and her husband were bombed out in Hamburg in 1943 and sent to the Bohemian forest, a very beautiful but lonely place. Since they didn't have money nor connections, they couldn't return to Hamburg and died there shortly after each other. My father says from homesickness and loneliness.

Notes for MARIE GRIEP:

Then my father had a sister Marie, who was married and lived in Rostok at the Baltic Sea (Ostsee). She had at least one daughter, Bertha, but maybe more children. Tante Sophie visited her in her late years in the East-Zone (Former Communist East Germany) in Rostok. We never met her.

Notes for SOPHIA GRIEP:

The sister next to my father is Tante Sophie, who practically raised him. The mother was too old and most probably tired of having and raising children. Tante Sophie never married, but cared for her old parents, then lived in their apartment, renting out to single people. Sometimes we lived there in the winter. In the summer we lived in a cottage in Hamburg-Farmsen. Tante Sophie was a piano teacher and I got my lessons from her. It was difficult for me going to school, then going to her lessons, and the long way home. I was tired, when I came home and didn't practise much or doing homework for school.

GERTRUD HAACK (Source: Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes.); b. January 01, 1897, Hamburg, Germany; d. November 13, 1979, Hamburg, Germany.

Notes for HANS HERMANN GRIEP:

Hans was a streetcar conductor, office worker, and representative for sail cloth etc.

Note

The youngest son was my father, Hans Hermann Griep, the rebellious one, untrained and never disciplined in any schooling. His interest was to live healthy, which he studied very much, but by being so unconventional cut himself off from many friends and relatives.

I do not know any more of my father's sisters or brothers. Since Hamburg was heavily bombed during World War II, I do not believe that there are birth registers available anymore from that time.

Since people in the olden times had large families I am quite sure that I have a lot of relatives in Mecklenburg.

Notes for OTTO GRIEP:

From Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep):

The oldest son was Otto Griep, who became a professor for chemistry at an all girls high school in Hamburg (Lerchenfeld Gymnasium). He married Else ?, whose parents had a furniture store somewhere at the Luebeckerstrasse in Hamburg Germany and must have been well off. They built a house outside the city limits of Hamburg in Gross Hansdorf, so that the Nazi party could not get him. His address was no longer in the city of Hamburg, but in the county of Schleswig-Holstein.

Notes for ANNA GRIEP:

Another sister was Anna, who married a man from Vienna from a rich house, but who hadn't learned anything and Tante Anna worked as a sewing sleeves at home to bring in the money. His last name was Wenig. They have two children: One son, whose name I don't know, and who was killed in Russia in World War II; One daughter, Leopoldine, called Poldi, who married a gardener. For some reason they were connected with the Salvation Army as receiver. Her husband had something wrong with him, either he didn't like to work, or was in prison or something, but they had two lovely children, whom I saw one day, when they visited Tante Sophie: a boy and a little girl. Poldi apparently couldn't learn very well, she never grasped the way to measure something on a scale, although my father and Tante Sophie tried to teach her in order for her to get a job in a store.

Tante Anna and her husband were bombed out in Hamburg in 1943 and sent to the Bohemian forest, a very beautiful but lonely place. Since they didn't have money nor connections, they couldn't return to Hamburg and died there shortly after each other. My father says from homesickness and loneliness.

Notes for SOPHIA GRIEP:

The sister next to my father is Tante Sophie, who practically raised him. The mother was too old and most probably tired of having and raising children. Tante Sophie never married, but cared for her old parents, then lived in their apartment, renting out to single people. Sometimes we lived there in the winter. In the summer we lived in a cottage in Hamburg-Farmsen. Tante Sophie was a piano teacher and I got my lessons from her. It was difficult for me going to school, then going to her lessons, and the long way home. I was tired, when I came home and didn't practise much or doing homework for school.

Notes for HANS HERMANN GRIEP:

Hans was a streetcar conductor, office worker, and representative for sail cloth etc.

Note

The youngest son was my father, Hans Hermann Griep, the rebellious one, untrained and never disciplined in any schooling. His interest was to live healthy, which he studied very much, but by being so unconventional cut himself off from many friends and relatives.

I do not know any more of my father's sisters or brothers. Since Hamburg was heavily bombed during World War II, I do not believe that there are birth registers available anymore from that time.

Since people in the olden times had large families I am quite sure that I have a lot of relatives in Mecklenburg.

WILHELM CHRISTIAN² HAACK (*JOHANN*¹) (Source: (1) Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes., (2) Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.) was born May 22, 1866 in Hedwigenkoog-Buesum, Germany, and died November 1948 in Hamburg, Germany. He married LINE MEYER (Source: (1) Griep, Hans - Genealogy research and Notes., (2) Hannelore Falkenberg, July 18, 1981, Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Notes.), daughter of PETER MEYER and MARGARETHA SOLTAU. She was born December 28, 1872 in Hamburg, Germany (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Letter September 2000.), and died May 18, 1936 in Hamburg, Germany (Source: Hannelore Falkenberg (Griep) Letter September 2000.).

Notes for WILHELM CHRISTIAN HAACK:

Godparents Peter Hinrich Allen, David Joachim Merkens, Mrs. Catharina Margaretha Hurtig.

Reimer Von Postel (Godfather of Hans Ewe Haack) was married to one of Hannelore Falkenberg/Griep's grandfather's sisters. They had a small farm in Westerdeichstrich. One of their sons became a lieutenant in the German army in World War 2 and right after than became the office manager with Hannelore's uncle Wilhelm Haack in Suederdeichstrich. Reimer had one son and one daughter.

Today the city of Buesum and Hedwigenkoog is one city under the name of Buesum. In the summer it is crowded with tourists. There is still a small fishing fleet there.

As a child Hannelore's grandfather played in the tide marches (when the tide went out). The boys caught flatfish by stepping on them when the water ran out. When he was a young man or teenager he borrowed someone's horses and wagon and went out into the tide marshes, as she recalls, he drove over to Helsen. But on his return the incoming tide caught up with him and he did not know what to do. So he let the horses find their own way and they made it safely home.

When he told me that he and his friends went into the field to the horses, who just had some foals, the horses drank milk from the mother horses, I told him that it was lucky. He just grinned.

I think that there is much more in the church register books in Suederdeich or in Buesum about the Haack and Diercks families. But we did not want to spend more time there when we visited in 1992. It is not easy to go through all the names and find the correct ones, because there are so many Haack and Diercks. We went twice to the church office in Seuderdeich. Someone before us had ripped a page out of those church books, without letting the secretary know it. She discovered it later. It would be nice to just take photographs from all those pages, then study them at home.
