Fulgham-Fulghum Family National Association Achieves IRS Tax-exempt Status

In a ruling dated March 25, 2004, the U.S. IRS conferred 501 (c) (7) tax exempt status to the FFFNA. The ruling states, “Based on information supplied, and assuming your operations will be as stated in your application for recognition, we have determined you are exempt from Federal income tax under section 501 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code as an organization described in the section indicated above” [(501 (c) (7) Social Club). This means that FFFNA is exempt from paying Federal income taxes; however, it is the Editor’s understanding that dues and donations to a 501 (c) (7) organization are not deductible by it's members. For this reason, efforts are being made to set up separate foundations for the proposed FFFNA Museum/Library and the FFFNA Scholarship fund with the objective of obtaining 501 (c) (3) status for them so that donations to the Museum/Library and the Scholarship fund will be deductible by donors. We will keep you informed as to the progress of these efforts.

Sometimes You Win
A Story behind the 1999 Kentucky Derby.

In May 1999, Elizabeth Mitchell and her boy-friend, Chuck Fulghum, rented a car and drove on a whim from New York City to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby. They knew nothing about horse racing, but they were ripe for good fortune: Fulghum, who'd been a Peace Corps volunteer near Chernobyl, had acute myelogenous leukemia and was just beginning to taste health again after his second month of chemotherapy. The night before the race, Mitchell dreamed about an art exhibition at Brown, where a man kept asking her if the paintings had "charisma." The next morning she learned that a chestnut colt named Charismatic was running for the Roses. Charismatic won the race. Mitchell and Fulghum had placed a whimsical bet on Charismatic, who started the race at 31 to 1 odds, based on the dream Ms. Mitchell had. The couple then followed the colt's storybook Triple Crown push, their hopes for the horse and Mr. Fulghum's recovery intertwined.

Mitchell's love affair turned out tragically, as Chuck Fulghum died of cancer. She spent the next several years exploring the world of jockeys and breeders and race fans.

The English Department of the University of Mississippi has designated their Oxford Campus Campaign contributions toward the establishment of a memorial fund - the Chuck Fulghum Memorial Fund for Student Excellence. Chuck Fulghum was a graduate student there for only one semester, but during that brief time, he changed many, many lives. He was diagnosed with leukemia at the end of the 1998 fall semester and though he fought it hard, he died on October 19, 1999.

Everyone who was lucky enough to know him will always remember his courage, his intelligence, and his moral and spiritual radiance. Chuck, who had already served in the Peace Corps in the Ukraine before entering graduate school did so much to help others the English Department was honored to set up this fund for student excellence in his memory.

In Memoriam

Myrtle Fulghum Neal, 89, died in Baton Rouge, LA General Hospital September 13, 2003. Funeral services were held in Winona, MS. Interment was in Mars Hill Methodist Cemetery, Duck Hill, MS, where five generations of Neals are buried.

She was the youngest daughter and last surviving child of Anthony Rayford Fulghum and Nellie Thompson Fulghum. Myrtle was born in Maben, MS on March 28, 1914 and she grew up in West Point, MS. Orphaned at age four, Myrtle was raised by her siblings. She was predeceased by her older sister, Myrtis Erlene, and eight brothers, George Wesley, Curtis Floyd, Doyle O'Pillion, Clayton Young, Clinton Edward, James Alvero, Willie Pinkney, and Grady Leroy (Bud). Two other brothers, John Robert and Melvin Augustus, died in early childhood.

Myrtle and her husband, R.E. Neal, were married upon graduation from Mississippi State College in 1932. For many years they lived in West Point, MS before moving to Lake Providence, LA in the 1950's. They were active in the community and the Methodist Church. She also was predeceased by her husband, R.E. Neal and a son, Gene Edris Neal.

Myrtle is survived by one son, Robert E. Neal, and three daughters, Beth Falls, Kathryn Lee, and Julia Severy as well as by eleven grandchildren and nineteen great grand children and one great-granddaughter. She is also survived by sister-in-law, Mrs. Clinton Fulghum.

Myrtle was a person of 'young at heart' spirit. In her mid-seventy's, she was found up in a tree, hammer and nails in hand, helping a couple of her grandchildren build a tree house. She and her beloved "R.E." always enjoyed sports, especially SEC and Mississippi State football. Later in life, they also became Boston Celtic basketball fans.

Mrs Neal had a great love for people and people gravitated toward her as she had such a sweet, ready smile and always enjoyed a good laugh.

Myrtle was talented and well-known for her gardening, sewing, and cooking skills. After her husband, R.E., died in 1987, she spent time with each of her daughters over the remaining years, and when someone invariably asked which was her favorite daughter, she quickly responded with, "the one I am with".

William Sydney Porter, 1862-1910 who used the pseudonym, O. HENRY, wrote the short story, The Duplicity of Hargraves, which involved a character known as “General Fulghum.” Richard T. Fulghum was the aide-de-camp to Brig. Gen Lawrence Baker during the Civil War and later was the Editor and Proprietor of The Greensboro, Patriot (North Carolina) newspaper. The connection between William Sydney Porter (O. Henry) and Richard T. Fulghum was that Porter worked at The Greensboro Patriot with Richard Fulghum. Porter used Richard Fulghum as the character for the General Fulghum in the story. The two knew each other well as Porter’s family had once owned the newspaper. Fulghum first appeared on the masthead of The Greensboro Patriot on November 5, 1879. The last edition published under his editorship was on Wednesday, June 29, 1881. The newspaper was sold by the owner and Fulghum died within a few years. Porter (O. Henry) left North Carolina and went to Austin, Texas. A former Editor and Proprietor of The Greensboro Patriot, Lyndon Swain, wrote the following about Fulghum, “His work is daily placed before the public – bright, newsy, agreeable – illustrating what a newspaper ought to be.”

Endangered Insects

For the first time, bugs have been added to Virginia’s list of endangered and threatened species. Frank Fulghum, Program Manager with the Virginia Agriculture Department’s Office of Plant and Pest Services said, “Virginia is one of the last states to add insects to its list of endangered species.” The Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services have designated four insects as endangered, Mitchell’s Satyr Butterfly, Holingsner’s Cave Beetle, Buffalo Mountain Mealbug and the Virginia Piedmont Water Boatman. Added to the threatened species list was the Northeastern Beach Tiger Beetle and the Appalachian Grizzled skipper, a small butterfly.

Sam Fulghum –
A committed FFFNA Member

The death last year of E. Sam Fulghum, Jr. at age 84, brought to an end one of the authors of the Fulgham/Fulghum Family heritage. Sam was from Hermitage, Tennessee.

Sam and his wife attended most of the 19 national reunions that have been conducted by the family. They were in attendance in Wadley, GA in 1987 when reunion host, Tommy Fulghum, asked who would be interested in hosting the 1988 reunion. Sam raised his hand and issued an invitation for the family to come to Tennessee to hold that reunion in Nashville.

As it turned out, the Nashville reunion had landmark proportions. It was there that the Family members in attendance voted to form a Fulgham/Fulghum Family National Association and to elect officers for the first time.

Sam was an Army veteran of World War II, and retired from the Army with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He will stand out, also, as a Fulgham/Fulghum Family National Association veteran who was unusually committed to working for the success of the Family nationwide.

MEET MY FAMILY GROUP; Part 7

by Robert S. Fulghum, Newsletter Editor

JAMES HOOKS FULGHUM, SR. 1905-1982

James Hooks Fulghum, Sr. was an avid Fulghum-Fulghum genealogist. His efforts in the 1940's and 1950's provided much of the basis for current Fulghum-Fulghum Family Genealogy. During World War II, gasoline rationing made it difficult for those traveling to make numerous short trips. Thus long trips, often with long layovers, were necessary to conduct business on the road. This environment enabled Jim to begin his genealogical studies as he traveled the South. Jim used a numerical system to track each Fulghum. He recorded the sibling birth order number of each person. One's number was preceded by those of his/her father, grandfather, etc. Captain Anthony's sons are the first number in this numerical sequence.

James Hooks Fulghum, Sr. was the son of Charles Mallary Fulghum and Matilda Slade, and was the seventh sibling in birth order, was born 18 September 1905 in Macon, Georgia. He was the grandson of James Fulghum and Jane Harrison Fulghum of Washington County, Georgia. Jim was the Great Grandson of Matthew Fulghum of Wayne County, North Carolina.

He was a member of Vineville Baptist Church in Macon. He was educated in the public schools of Macon. He graduated from Mercer University in 1926 and attended Law School at George Washington University in Washington, DC. While in law school, he was a clerk in the Washington, DC law library of Dean G. Acheson who later became U.S. Secretary of State. Jim's study of Law was interrupted by the Great Depression of 1929 and he was never able to return to his Law studies.

While a student at Mercer U., Jim did summer research with the U.S.D.A. on Japanese Beetles that had invaded the northeastern U.S. During that summer employment, he met and became engaged to Frances Wicraft Schmidt of Riverton, N. J. They eloped during the senior class trip of Miss Schmidt's High School class to Washington, D.C. where Jim was at that time a law student. The wedding was held on 5 April 1928 in St. John's Church in Washington, DC.

Jim Fulghum worked for Southern Dairies in the Washington, DC area and, later, in Roanoke, Virginia where the family relocated in 1935 after Jim was appointed manager of the Southern Dairies plant in Roanoke. In 1939-1940, he was in the dairy and frozen food business in Greensboro, NC. In 1940, he accepted the offer of an old friend, Joseph Logan, to become a traveling representative for Martha Washington Candies of Roanoke, VA. While working in this position, he found the opportunity to begin his genealogical study of our family. Later, he was self-employed in property management of properties he acquired. The family moved to Salem, VA in 1940 and then back to Roanoke in 1944.

Jim died 16 December of 1982. He was interred in Evergreen Cemetery in Roanoke, Virginia.

Jim and Fran had four children. Robert Schmidt, born in 1929, Professor Emeritus of Microbiology, Brody School of Medicine at East Carolina University, Greenville, NC; James Hooks, Jr., born in 1933, Attorney in Roanoke, VA; Peter Cropper, born in 1934, Episcopal Priest in Maryland; and Frances Matilda (Tanza), born in 1938, homemaker, church worker, and wife of Walter S. Barton, M.D. in Wytheville, VA.
