CLAN HUME.

Hume is from the Celtic IOM, meaning a hill. At the village of Hume in Berwickshire, Scotland, the ruins of Hume Castle still stand on the summit of a rocky hill about 500 feet in height. In the charter of 1150 Hume Church is called Ecclesia de Hom. The genitive of IOM is IHOM, of which the I is mute. The final e is a modern addition. Hume is spelled variously in parish registers as Hume, Home, Hoom, Hoome; still is pronounced locally Hum (u as in French) almost as him.

disinherited by his father in consequence of some disagreement between father and son is not known, but the family traditions are strongly assertive of the supposed fact. The graves of George Hume and his grandson George are still to be seen in Gordon Churchyard.

224. HUME, JAMES BUNYAN.

Born Jan. 28, 1827, at Stamford, N. Y.
Died May 18, 1904, at Berkeley, California.
He went to California in 1850 and settled in El Dorado County.
Very soon afterwards he was elected sheriff of that county and almost immediately had to face his constituents with weapons in the protection of a prisoner against weapons in hands of lynchers. It was a most trying ordeal, but, having been elected to uphold and maintain law and order he proposed to do it.

His acquaintances among the would-be lynchers knew that he had been elected sheriff because of his fearlessness and courage, and that he meant just what he said, and they retired from the field. It was his duty to dislodge or convict all the criminals who infested that wild county in those wild days and so thoroughly did he perform that duty that he soon made himself the terror of evil persons and desperadoes in El Dorado. His success as a hunter of law breakers was established from the beginning. His knowledge of the practices and habits of criminals was extraordinary, and every crime of gravity and importance was brought to his attention throughout California. On his record in El Dorado County he was made warden of the Carson prison in 1870.

After two years at Carson he found the hum-drum life of a prison keeper distasteful, and entered the detective and protective service of Wells, Fargo & Co.

In the many years in which he was at the head of this service, which ended with his final illness, he had the responsibility of safe-guarding countless millions of dollar's worth of money and bullion, and has faced numerous hard, mysterious and dangerous problems and duties, and has had innumerable narrow escapes from violent death. His career was a wonderful one of adventures and of triumphs of skill and daring, and many dangerous and notorious criminals have passed through his hands to long imprisonment and death.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Robert Wilson Hume cast in his lot with the North and enlisted in Co. I., 11th Illinois Cavalry, in 1861, and served with honor to the close of the war. The Indianola (Neb.) Reporter says of him “Mr. Hume was a pioneer, and one of the few that blazed the trail and made the soil yield two blades where before there had been but one through his thrift and industry. He came to this section when strong men were needed and in sunshine and shadow always placed his faith in the future, and lived to see the day when Nature smiled most graciously upon him. His demise is mourned by the entire community.”
